To Potential Sponsors,

On behalf of the Norwegian Neuropsychological Society, it is our great pleasure to extend a warm welcome to the 15th Nordic Meeting in Neuropsychology, which will be held in Trondheim in August 2024.

This gathering is a significant event for our community, as it brings together leading experts, researchers, and clinicians across the Nordic region and beyond. The Nordic Meetings in Neuropsychology have a longstanding history of providing a unique opportunity to share insights, exchange ideas, and strengthen collaborations and friendships that contribute to advancing our field.

Nobel Laureate Edvard Moser will deliver the opening lecture on the fascinating topic of neural computation of space and time - kicking off a program that will focus on brain health interventions and technology, with a specific emphasis on the ways in which neuropsychological knowledge and cutting-edge technology pave the way for significant clinical impact.

We are thrilled to host this meeting in the beautiful city of Trondheim known for its rich cultural and scientific heritage and stunning natural surroundings. Our planned social events will provide a unique opportunity to experience both the historic and contemporary vibes of the city. We hope that the meeting will be both intellectually stimulating and a memorable experience.

We would like to express our gratitude to the scientific- and organizing committees for their hard work and dedication putting together an exciting program that promises to be both informative and enjoyable. We also wish to thank the neuropsychological societies of all Nordic countries for their invaluable contribution in making this event a reality. We look forward to welcoming you in Trondheim in 2024.

See you in Trondheim!
